

AUTHOR AGREEMENT

This agreement sets out the terms under which you, the author or joint author, agree to permit the University of New South Wales Law Journal ('Journal') to use your submission and to permit third parties to do so.

1. Editorial Discretion

By making your submission to the Journal, you agree that the Editors' decision on whether or not to publish your submission in the Journal shall be final. If your submission is accepted for publication an express letter of acceptance will be sent to you, in either hard copy or electronic format. No other correspondence from the Journal should be relied upon as evidence of an agreement between the Journal and you to publish your submission.

Acceptance may be subject to conditions set out in the letter of acceptance. Determination of whether those conditions have been complied with is entirely within the discretion of the Editors.

2. The Review Process

All submissions may be checked for plagiarism with the use of an appropriate application, such as Turnitin, iThenticate, or any other software that the Editors deem appropriate. As part of their normal operation, these applications may retain a copy of your submission for future plagiarism detection. As the Journal publishes original, scholarly pieces, it is a condition of submission that you consent to this process of plagiarism detection.

Articles that are considered to be potentially worthy of publication will be sent for anonymous external review. Though every effort is made to expedite this process, the Journal is unable to accept responsibility for delays caused by virtue of this review process. Please note that while reviewers' comments are given all due weight, the Journal retains complete discretion as to whether to publish your article.

3. The Editing Process

All articles accepted for publication in the Journal undergo a rigorous editing process. Where referencing is insufficient or unclear, you agree to supply further details if requested by the Editors. You are responsible for checking the accuracy of all references.

In making your submission to the Journal, you accept that the Editorial Board may, at its discretion, make additions, deletions and alterations to comply with the Australian Guide to Legal Citation and Journal's Additions, and, from time to time, to enhance expressions or clarify meaning by changing the wording of the text.

A final copy of your edited submission will be sent to you for your approval prior to publication. While every effort will be made to assuage authorial concerns, the Journal retains the right to withdraw its offer of publication in the event of an irreconcilable difference of opinion between you and the Journal.

4. Copyright

It is a condition of publication that you, the author(s), assign copyright in your submission to the Journal once it has been formally accepted for publication. This entitles the Journal, amongst other things, to publish the submission in any format and allow third parties to do so on such terms as the Editor thinks fit. Once copyright has been assigned, in addition to your rights under copyright law, the Journal grants you a licence to:

- Use your article, or parts of it, in other publications, provided that the Journal is acknowledged as the original place of publication. Where the use of an article, or parts of it, in another publication is more than a mere citation or quotation, express written permission must be sought from and granted by the Journal in advance.
- Use your article, or parts of it, for your own teaching and research purposes.
- Publish a copy of your article as it appears in the Journal on institutional repositories such as SSRN. The Journal will provide a soft copy of your article for this purpose.

If your submission is published, you are entitled to one free copy of the issue of the Journal in which your contribution appears (in consideration for the above assignment and warranties). Further copies may be ordered at the author discount rate of 20% off the retail price.

5. Warranties

By signing this document, you warrant that your submission:

- has not been and will not be submitted for publication elsewhere unless the Journal has communicated in writing its intention not to publish the submission;
- is an original work, and neither it nor any significant part of it has been published elsewhere in either identical or substantially similar form, including in online commercial databases and non-commercial websites or databases such as SSRN;
- will not be published elsewhere in either identical or substantially similar form except in accordance with clause 4 of the Author Agreement;
- does not infringe another party's copyright;
- does not infringe the rights of any third party; and
- is not defamatory or obscene.

You also warrant that:

- if your submission contains material not created solely by you, you have obtained the necessary permissions to use such material, and that it is properly attributed to its authors; and
- if your submission reproduces any part of your previous published works, these prior works are referenced.

Upon notice of the breach of any of these representations and warranties by you, the Journal may in its sole and absolute discretion unconditionally withdraw its offer of publication. You agree that, in the event of a withdrawal of offer based on your breach of the aforementioned terms, you will not take further action against the Journal.

By signing this document, you also agree to indemnify the Journal, its Editors, Executive Committee and Editorial Board for any loss or damage arising from breach of any of these representations and warranties and for any other liability which may arise in connection with the publication or reproduction of your manuscript.

This Author Agreement is governed by the laws of New South Wales.

To be completed by the author(s) at the time of submission, and returned to the Journal. The Journal prefers a signed copy of all pages of the agreement to be scanned and uploaded in PDF form to the Journal submission page, or sent by email to law.journal@unsw.edu.au. If this is not feasible, the Journal will accept copies submitted by fax or mail. Where submissions are co-authored, each author must sign the Author Agreement below.
